PAMM & MAM

PAMM (Percentage Allocation Management Module) and MAM (Multi-Account Manager) accounts allow fund managers to manage multiple accounts from a single account without having to create an investment fund.

The performance (profits and losses) of a PAMM or MAM account manager is distributed among the managed accounts. The clients' managed accounts are connected to our account manager's main account and all trades made by the manager are reflected proportionally in the clients' accounts.

Managed Accounts

Secure Prime Trade PAMM Master account balance represents the total amount of all clients' deposits.

To ensure the security of investors' funds, client deposits remain in their own trading accounts, our managers do not have direct access to these accounts and therefore cannot make any withdrawals.

What is a PAMM account?

The PAMM account features a management module that distributes the sizes of trades according to an allocation percentage. This solution is offered by many Bitcoin & forex brokers for investors and fund managers.

With a PAMM account, an investor can also allocate a percentage of his account to one or more managers.

The manager's PAMM account is a large "main account", whose capital is equal to the sum of the sub-accounts.

The manager's trades are automatically replicated in the sub-accounts according to a percentage basis. For example, if the trader makes a 100-lot trade on the EURUSD, the trade is divided among the individual sub-accounts (clients) into smaller parts based on the percentage of equity of each sub-account in relation to the master account. This means that if the size of an individual sub-account is equal to 1% of the main account's equity, the size of the trade on this account will be 1 lot (1% of 100 lots).

What is a MAM account?

The MAM account should not be confused with the MetaQuotes multi-terminal system, which has its limitations. A MAM account allows you to use the percentage allocation method like a PAMM account, but it provides greater flexibility to allocate the trades and adjust the risk of each sub-account based on the clients' risk profiles.

For example, the manager can allocate trades on a fixed basis, which means that he can define the number of lots traded by each individual account. This fixed allocation can also be done using a LAMM (Lot Allocation Management Module) account.

The manager can also change the amount of leverage applied to the sub-accounts if his clients want to take on a greater level of risk

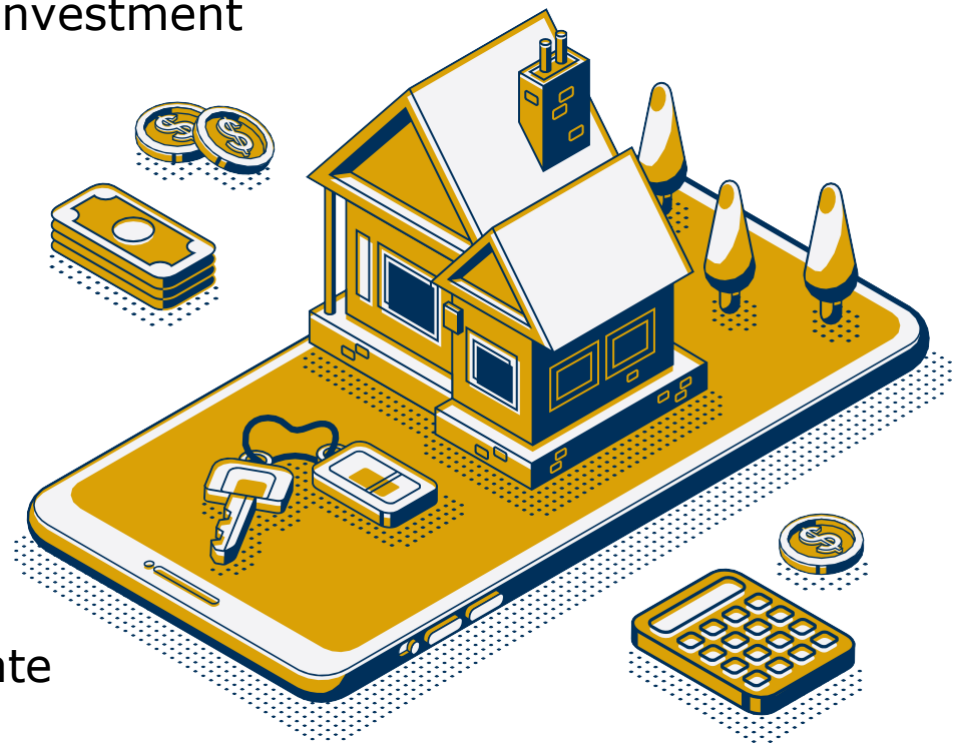

REAL ESTATE AND PROPERTY LISTING

Buying and owning real estate is an exciting investment strategy, that can be both satisfying and lucrative. Unlike stock and bond investors, prospective real estate owners can use leverage to buy a property by paying a portion of the total cost up front, then paying off the balance, plus interest, over time. This also comes with its own risks.

Buying and owning real estate is an exciting investment strategy, that can be both satisfying and lucrative. Unlike stock and bond investors, prospective real estate owners can use leverage to buy a property by paying a portion of the total cost up front, then paying off the balance, plus interest, over time. This also comes with its own risks.

Real estate is one of the oldest and most popular asset classes. Most new investors in real estate know that, but what they don't know is how many different types of real estate investments exist.

It goes without saying that each type of real estate investment has its potential benefits and pitfalls, including unique quirks in cash flow cycles, lending traditions, and standards of what is considered appropriate or normal, so you'll want to study them well before you start adding them to your portfolio.

If you're intent on developing, acquiring, or owning, or flipping real estate, you can better come to an understanding of the peculiarities of what you're facing by dividing real estate into several categories.

Beyond this, there are other ways to invest in real estate if you don't want actually to deal with the properties yourself. Real estate investment trusts, or REITs, are particularly popular in the investment community.

When you invest through a REIT, you are buying shares of a corporation that owns real estate properties and distributes practically all of its income as dividends.

CANNABIS

Big institutional investors are getting increasingly high on the growth potential for products derived from the cannabis plant, more commonly known as marijuana. Bank of Montreal, in a decidedly bullish forecast, says the market could be as large as $194 billion worldwide by 2025, should the U.S. federal government legalize cannabis, Business Insider reports.

Growth like this would further boost cannabis stocks and spur more entrants. A long list of cannabis-related stocks already trade on North American exchanges and include Cronos Group Inc. (CRON), Aurora Cannabis Inc. (ACB), Canopy Growth Corp. (CGC), and Tilray Inc. (TLRY).

Secure Prime Trade is a big investor in the cannabis market, we strive to help investor make good use of funds deposited in their accounts with the help of professional fund managers for the best possible investment returns from this flourishing sector.

Significance For Investors

What's striking is how rapidly cannabis investments are being embraced by Wall Street and other areas. In a poll of 120 senior executives at leading private equity, venture capital (VC), hedge fund, and other institutional investment organizations, almost 33% said that the cannabis industry has the greatest growth potential this year, a close second behind technology, according to accounting firm EisnerAmper, which did the survey. The most bullish were hedge funds, with 37% putting cannabis in first place, per BI.

So no wonder that money is rushing into cannabis investments of all kinds. Already, the combined market value of public cannabis stocks trading on U.S. and Canadian exchanges has ballooned to tens of billions of dollars. Also, venture capital firms invested $1.3 billion in 150 cannabis-related deals in the first half of 2019, already outstripping the $1 billion in VC money spent in all of 2018, VC deal monitor Pitchbook calculates, per BI. Private equity firms also have jumped in, investing $474 million in 19 cannabis-related transactions during 2018, and are investing at an even faster clip in 2019, according to the same sources.

With this type of impressive growth, it's no wonder that many investors are interested in investing in publicly traded cannabis stocks.

CRYPTOCURRENCY INVESTMENTS

A cryptocurrency is a digital coin, designed to be transferred between people in virtual transactions. Cryptocurrencies exist only as data and not as physical objects; you cannot actually hold a Bitcoin in your hand or keep Ethereum in your safe. Owning a Bitcoin means you have the collective agreement of each and every computer on the Bitcoin network that it is currently owned by you and more importantly that it was legitimately created by a miner.

"The future of money is digital currency, It's money 2.0"

You don't need to be a cryptocurrency guru to earn from this sector. Our professional traders know just when to make the right calls and which coins to flip. Trades are automated with professional human supervision to make sure trades are healthy and free from errors or loss of funds.

What cryptocurrency miners do

Cryptocurrencies are handled like cash but are mined like gold. Mining is simply the process of verifying a crypto transaction. People around the world transfer e-coins from wallet to wallet, while miners use computer-processing power to maintain the blockchain and verify these transactions.

When a new crypto is launched, its founders announce how many coins will be mined. Once the quota is reached, no further coins can be produced. The first digital coin introduced was Bitcoin, which remains today the benchmark for all other digital coins. Among other currencies that have made their way into the cryptocurrency hall-of-fame we have: Ethereum, Ripple, Litecoin, EOS, and a number of derived currencies, including Bitcoin Cash and Bitcoin Gold.

COMPOUNDING

You can grow the money you save by investing it to earn a return. You can make your money grow faster if you also invest the money you earn (your return) along with the money you started out with. This is called compounding.

Compounding typically refers to the increasing value of an asset due to the interest earned on both a principal and accumulated interest. This phenomenon, which is a direct realization of the time value of money (TMV) concept, is also known as compound interest. Compound interest works on both assets and liabilities.

The minimum amount for compounding is $200 and the minimum periods are 24 hours depending on the package invested in.

For example, let's say you put $10,000 in an account that pays 15% daily, You'll get a $11,500 in compounding interest for the first 24 hours of your investment.

If you leave that $500 in your account, it will start earning interest, too. That means "Compound interest is the eighth wonder of the world. He who understands it, earns it ... he who doesn't ... pays it."
